BabyBelly, 6.05pm, 3-27 August 2006

The Gig That God Doesn't Want You To See

Jambalaya presents May Contain Nuts, a new comedy show from the popular sketch team. Jambalaya has been delighting London audiences with their inspired characters, physical comedy and word play since 2004. "May Contain Nuts" is their first Edinburgh show.

Jambalaya's inventive humour offers a refreshing perspective on the insanity of modern life. But the sketch team is lucky to be here at all.

An Act of God?

Jambalaya - a trio of thirty something writers/performers - came relatively late to the comedy scene. James Brunskill, Paul Conneely and Giles Tebbitts met three years ago at an evening class and have been making each other laugh ever since. Encouraged to turn their conversations into sketches, they were booked for a gig.

Unfortunately on the night, the venue caught fire while Jambalaya waited in the wings. The theatre was evacuated. Unperturbed by such divine intervention, Jambalaya persevered and are now popular performers at Sketch Club, Downstairs at the Kings Head, Sketch Fix, Soho and the Canal Café Theatre. They regularly bring the house down, although in an entirely different way nowadays.

When not writing and performing comedy, the members of Jambalaya lead extraordinary lives featuring jobs, mortgages and kids. And now they're taking May Contain Nuts to the Edinburgh Fringe. Are they nuts? Come see the show and find out...
